Look at this sculpture by Eduardo Paolozzi.

What colours and shapes can you see? Draw some of them below to make your own artwork.

Can you find this work by Christian Noelle Charles?

Here you can see the artist taking a selfie.

Ask your grown up to help you take a selfie with your favourite artwork in this gallery.

What do you like about it? Is it the colour, the shapes, the size? You can sketch it below.

Now find an artwork you DON'T like (that's okay too). Can you think of what you don't like about it?

Today is May 1st. It's been 71 days since we last spoke. I can imagine what you are thinking. This day of all days, this year of all years, this place of all places, there's no way in hell you'd be in a museum. You're thinking that you thought I knew you better.

Some artists use texts in their work, like Sharon Hayes, in these pink love letters. Can you see them in the gallery?

If you had to write a letter, who would it be for? And what would you like to say to them? Have a go below.

Towards the end of this gallery, you can find a TV screen with a film work called "The Pot" by Sarah Forrest. Look at the film. What can you hear? How do you think it would feel like to touch the clay? Now imagine your pot is ready: how would you decorate it? Have a go below:
